REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

WHAT IS A FAMILY SERVICE AGENCY?

A family service agency concerns itself on the widest possible basis, with the problems and difficulties, the trials, troubles and tribulations, of citizens who, as individuals or as families, find themselves unable to cope with the demands and the tensions of modern life. As the family is the basic social unit, the efforts of a family service agency are concentrated primarily on the preservation of family unity, the stabilising of unstable families and the giving of supportive aid which many families need at points of threatened breakdown.

HOW DOES A FAMILY SERVICE AGENCY OPERATE?

The C.W.S., as a typical agency, operates through a staff of trained and experienced social workers. It provides a centre where people may come for consultation about problems in family relationships, for financial aid or for information and advice about other community resources which are available to help families in trouble. At the C.W.S., the troubled citizen will find skilled and sympathetic workers who will join him in planning how he may best solve his problem or surmount his difficulties, and who will contribute the human touch and the practical guidance which mean so much in moments of crisis.

Some details of C.W.S. work during the past year are recorded in the pages of this report.

THE YEAR'S STORY IN FIGURES

C.W.S. staff was increased during the year by the addition of two social workers. Under the direction of Mr. Leonard Tierney, its Director of Social Work and Research, the agency is now equipped to give an extended casework service to troubled families. Increasing advantage of this is being taken by Commonwealth and State Departments which contact human problems, by Hospital Almoner Departments, and by welfare agencies and the community generally.

The total number of cases dealt with during the year was 1,180, as compared with 906 in the previous year. An approximate percentage breakdown of these 1,180 cases is shown under various headings in the following tables:

—Juvenile Advisory Committee, 1956.

FOSTER CARE FOR CHILDREN

In order to develop a more comprehensive community service, the C.W.S. has been experimenting in the field of foster care. Continued requests for child placement help have brought out sharply the lack of foster care facilities in Victoria, particularly for those children for whom Children's Welfare Department aid cannot be sought, and who constitute the greater proportion of children in need of care. Voluntary children's institutions have always been co-operative, but it is found to be increasingly difficult to make placements for temporary periods. In any case, it is the C.W.S. belief that the most satisfactory solution in many cases is to be found in a properly based, foster care system.

The C.W.S. has been fortunate, during the past year, to establish contact with a small group of capable parents who have been willing to share their homes and their lives with others. So far, fourteen children have been placed for varying periods with these fine foster parents. The C.W.S. is deeply grateful to them for their most valuable co-operation.

The Committee are convinced that the provision of foster care is one of the finest acts of social service which can be rendered by a family service agency. It is a plan of treatment which calls for great resourcefulness from the foster parent who, in most cases, must strive to build or rebuild the child's respect for his parents.

C.W.S. concept of foster care invariably includes the possibility of the return of the child to his parents. Hence, it is necessary for our social workers to keep in close touch with the parents to help them overcome those problems which caused the separation.

One case which involved close contact with the father and foster parents over many months, originated with the need for the placement of two boys. The mother's state of health was such that she had been medically advised a prolonged period of rest away from the duties and the cares of the home. Because of his work, it was impossible for the father to look after the boys. C.W.S. arranged foster care for the boys over many months until eventually the mother was able to resume her home duties. After the boys had been returned home, the father wrote to us to say, inter alia:

"The boys are all home now and are very well behaved. They are a credit to the foster parents and my wife and I are very pleased."

AID FOR MIGRANTS

Migrants with social, employment and other problems have found their way in increasing numbers to the C.W.S. They have been referred from such quarters as the Commonwealth Immigration Department, the Commonwealth Employment Service and International Social Service. This last-mentioned organisation is a world-wide one, established to deal with social problems which involve action in more than one country. Post-war conditions and migration have produced many such problems. An Australian Branch of I.S.S., with headquarters in Sydney, was established last year. It is a tribute to the standard and efficiency of C.W.S. work that that agency should have been asked to act for I.S.S. in many Victorian cases of an exceedingly difficult and complicated type.

HOUSING

Mr. Tierney, Director of Social Work, represented the C.W.S. at a conference on emergency housing which was convened by the Minister of Housing (Mr. Petty), and gave evidence before the Royal Commission on Housing.

Mr. Tierney has also been giving certain co-operation to the Brotherhood of St. Laurence in connection with the rehabilitation work which the Brotherhood has undertaken at the request of the Government among a number of sub-standard families formerly resident at Camp Pell but now transferred to a housing estate.

HEARING AID SERVICE

Pop in to the office of the Citizens' Welfare Service in Exhibition Street any Wednesday morning, and you will see in progress a fine humanitarian activity. Hearing aid experts, complete with audiometers and other necessary equipment, are busily and sympathetically engaged in testing the hearing of elderly men and women who, because of their deafness, have been invited to attend by appointment, and whose reduced circumstances debar the purchase of a hearing aid.

This service was inaugurated early in 1953 by the C.W.S. in association with the Hearing Aid Distributors' Section of the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce. During the past year, 55 deaf citizens, mainly Age and Invalid Pensioners, were fitted with hearing aids. Altogether, since the inception of the scheme, 235 citizens have been so assisted. Once again, warm thanks are due—

1. to those members of the public who have donated second-hand sets without which the service could not continue;
2. to those firms which, free of charge, have reconditioned gifted sets, made experts available for testing purposes at a fortnightly clinic at the C.W.S. office, and supplied all necessary ear-moulds;
3. to Eveready (Aust.) Ltd. for gifts of batteries to cover the initial installation of hearing aids.

We have received many warm expressions of thanks, verbally and in writing, from those whom we have been able to help with hearing aids. One Age Pensioner, writing from the country, said—

"Just a few lines to thank you and your staff for their kindness when I was in Melbourne. I cannot thank you enough for the hearing aid which is functioning beautifully, and for restoring to me the privilege of being able to hear more plainly."

ADVISORY SERVICE FOR ELDERLY CITIZENS . . .

At a conference, last December, of agencies interested in the subject of the care of the aged, there was unanimous agreement that a need existed for a well-organised advisory service through which information or assistance would be available to old people in need of such a service. It was further agreed that the most appropriate agency, in respect of experience and trained personnel, to develop such a service is the C.W.S. Already, through its hearing aid activity and its general casework, the C.W.S. has many contacts with elderly citizens, and the Committee are prepared to develop the desired specialised service if they can be assured of financial support to meet the increased administrative cost which would be involved.

FINANCE—Administration

The last C.W.S. report emphasised the need for increased income to ensure the maintenance of an expanded service. Many old friends have continued to assist generously, and some new friends have been secured. Unhappily, the total of contributions has fallen far short of requirements, as will be seen from the financial statements on other pages. Even the sale of £3,200 of invested capital during the year did not overtake an overdraft at 30th June of over £300. This disposal of capital has seriously reduced the resources of the agency but has been necessary in order to maintain what the Committee believe to be an essential service. The Committee hope that, before assets become completely exhausted, some source or sources in the community will have been discovered through which the continued maintenance of the service will be assured.

FINANCE—Relief

The expanded casework service which the C.W.S. has developed has involved increased expenditure on material relief. Financial help, constructively given, may be an important part of the plan of treatment of a disturbed or disorganised family, and is not always available from statutory or other sources. It has been necessary, during the year, to spend on material relief considerably more than was received for that purpose, and this has entailed a further inroad on shrinking reserves. An earnest appeal is made to citizens generally for contributions which will help the C.W.S. on the relief giving side of its work. The Committee wish to emphasise the fact that everything donated for material relief purposes is expended without any deductions whatsoever. The cost of administering relief funds is a charge against the general or administration funds of the agency.

CO-OPERATION APPRECIATED

It should also be emphasised that the C.W.S. does not use its own funds if the material help in any case is available from some other agency. In this connection, the Committee wish to record their warm appreciation of the assistance which is always most readily given by relief agencies whose co-operation is sought.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Committee much regretted losing, because of pressure of business and other responsibilities, the active co-operation of Councillor Howard Norman and Mr. G. C. Tootell, but know that the agency continues to enjoy the sympathetic interest of both these gentlemen.

Mrs. L. Orbuck joined the Committee during the year, thereby establishing a happy link with the Jewish Women's Guild which has always shown itself ready to give generous co-operation in the material aid of recommended families.

The Committee are still short of their full membership and efforts are being made to fill vacancies.

STAFF

The casework staff has been greatly strengthened by the appointment, during the year, of Miss Kathleen Foley and Miss Catherine Brown, both social work diplomates.

Mrs. E. Paterson, who had given useful part-time service as consulting dietitian and home economist, resigned and has not yet been replaced.

DOUGLAS KEEP, President.

S. GREIG SMITH, Secretary.

SOME C.W.S. STORIES

DISTURBED LIFE STABILISED

A major problem encountered by social workers from time to time arises from the tendency of some fathers to lose or change employment to a degree where the family becomes impoverished and heavily in debt. In such extreme cases, there is usually mental illness or great anxiety, and it is pointless to seek further employment without trying to remove the pressure on the client, or to attempt to solve the family problem merely by the giving of material aid. This latter course actually may be necessary as a preliminary to casework support for, in the case of men suffering from severe anxiety, there is usually no statutory benefit which can be sought.

The case of David M— illustrates this type of problem. He is 36 years old and the father of four young children. He paid rent of £3/6/- per week. In the 12 months preceding his first contact with the C.W.S. he had average earnings of less than £5 per week and had reached a stage where light and gas had been disconnected, an eviction order was impending and a number of distress warrants taken out. David was reluctant to talk of his real difficulties. He was sure that his problem was merely temporary and he was most resistant to accepting "charity." To relieve some of the pressures, an immediate expenditure of £25 was incurred. His family were then brought into the picture and the social worker paid many visits to the home. Over the first two months, the major part of our efforts was in trying to encourage David that we really wanted to help. Meanwhile his erratic employment continued — sometimes he would remain in a job only a few hours before giving notice. Continued evening visits to his home finally encouraged David to bring out all his feelings of shame and inadequacy; his feelings that his marriage had failed and that there was no further hope for him. From this point we made progress to a stage where David is in a much happier and more contented frame of mind. He has now been in the one job for nearly 12 months and has recently been promoted to the position of leading hand.

TIMELY AID AND FRIENDLY SERVICE

Mrs. X is a young wife and mother, only 24 years of age. She was a distressed and desperate little woman when she came into the C.W.S. office. Her husband had contracted poliomyelitis three months previously, and had just been discharged from hospital. He had applied for an Invalid Pension which would not become available for several weeks. As an Invalid Pension applicant, he was not eligible to receive Sickness Benefit. All possible resources were exhausted, and the little family, which included a baby, were literally faced with starvation.

The family live some 25 miles from Melbourne where there is no local welfare agency to which they might turn for help. It was early afternoon when Mrs. X called at the C.W.S. and she had had nothing to eat since early morning. A C.W.S. social worker, having heard her story, had no hesitation in giving her some immediate cash assistance. Her face lighted up as she said: "Now I can go and have a cup of tea."

Subsequent financial help was given, and was continued until statutory benefits were received.

But the story does not end there. This little family are in need of much supportive help as they adjust themselves to the altered circumstances created by a disabled breadwinner. They are buying their home on terms. Other commitments, incurred when X was earning good wages, still remain to be met. With material aid as may be necessary, and skilled service, the C.W.S. will work with the family through their period of adjustment.

Timely and adequate aid, and the friendly service of skilled social workers, materially help to cushion the worst effects of disaster such as befell the X family.

“THE RADIO WAS JUST A NOISE”

Mrs. F. has been deaf for five years and she and her husband are pensioners. Their combined income won't stretch far enough to cover the cost of a hearing aid, so Mrs. F. has remained in her silent world, broken only by such conversations as she can carry on only with great difficulty.

Someone told Mrs. F. of the Citizens' Welfare Service. “I am deaf,” she wrote to us, “and miss a lot in life. I suffer a lot but, if I could hear a little better, I would be happier.”

Well, Mrs. F. is happier now. She was invited to attend at the C.W.S. office where a hearing aid expert tested her and fitted her with one of the many hearing aids which have been donated by generous citizens. The service given to Mrs. F. included the provision of an individually moulded ear piece and batteries.

The joy which this service brought into the life of Mrs. F. is reflected in the letter which she wrote some weeks later. “I am wearing the aid,” she said, “and getting used to the sounds and I am taking an interest in the radio which was just a noise before.”
